Always Speak Last.

I had a bible study today. It was not going well. The fellow was upset, on edge, and not there to listen. And frankly, it just wasn't coming together well. So I just listened. I kept asking questions. I reserved all judgment and diffused with nods instead of counter points. Right at the end of his lengthy presentation: He said something. One little thing. It changed everything.

It was the crucial piece I needed. Everything I was planning to say was completely altered by this one fact. Once I spoke, knowing that one thing, the conversation turned to hope quickly. He listened. He smiled (a little). And we plan to talk more again soon. God can do so many great things, but we need to help things out a little - maybe starting with: Always speak last.

A good principal in Bible Study and Evangelism is this,

“God made man with two ears
and only one mouth;
use MORE of the first
and LESS of the second”
